JOURNALISM STUDENTS DO BETTER

Students who work on a newspaper or yearbook staff in high school do better in high school and college than students with no journalism experience, according to a 2008 study. The study found:

- High school students who were members of a journalism staff had higher grade point averages in English, Social Studies, Math and Science than students who were not members of journalism staff.
- High school students who were members of a journalism staff scored in the 81st percentile in the English portion of the ACT test. High school students who were not members of a journalism staff scored in the 69th percentile.
- High school students who were members of a journalism staff reported that high school journalism classes developed their English skills better than any other course including English courses.
- High school students who were members of a journalism staff were more involved in extracurricular activities such as clubs, student government and were elected captain of a team more often than students who were not members of a journalism staff. They were also more likely to take an advanced English placement course and to volunteer in the community.
- College students who were members of a high school journalism staff had higher grade point averages in their first college English courses than students who were not members of a high school journalism staff.
- College students who were members of a high school journalism staff had higher overall grade point averages than students who were not members of a high school journalism staff.
- College students who were members of a high school journalism staff wrote better on the ACT COMP (College Outcome Measures Test) than students who were not members of a high school journalism staff.

Decisions, Decisions

Which staff is right for me?

When completing the attached form, please do so with careful consideration. Advanced Publications and Advanced Journalism are full year courses that carry a full year commitment. If you are selected as a staff member, please keep in mind that you are doing more than "just enrolling in another class," you are joining a team. The staff and the entire student body are relying on you to do your job and to complete every assignment to the best of your ability.

Advanced Publications/Yearbook

Since 1980, the Fentonian staffs have worked to improve the quality and content of the publication. Their efforts are evident in the awards the book has received:

- 34 Spartan Awards (presented to the top yearbooks in the state by the Michigan Interscholastic Press Association)
- Numerous regional and national awards, including five Silver Crowns and five Gold Crowns (which ranks the book among the top three percent of high school yearbooks in the nation's)
- Four Pacemaker Award (which is comparable to the Gold Crown)
- Induction into the MIPA Hall of Fame
- Induction into the National Scholastic Press Association High School Publication Hall of Fame

The commitment you are required to make to the class is not as overwhelming as it may seem. Staff members are given one month to complete a double page spread (two facing pages in the yearbook). This means that the staffer will write, edit, rewrite, type and fit the copy, help select pictures for the page, write the captions for those pictures and write the headline. In short, he/she will transform a blank piece of paper into the finished product you see in the book. This is ample time if the staffer utilizes the class period; however, some out of class time may be required to complete deadlines.

In order to complete deadlines, one evening per month will be designated as a "late night" work session. Each student must attend all these late nights. If a student is unable to make a "late night," the work may be completed during SRT.

Because we must deliver pages to our printer on schedule, each staffer must meet his/her deadline, or his/her grade will suffer. Students and parents should keep in mind that a majority of this work will be completed on an "individual study" basis. While the student's editors and the adviser will give help and direction, it is up to each person to see that his/her work is completed. Students unable to work under these conditions should not enroll in the class.

Another commitment each staffer must make is selling ads. Hopefully, the campaign will begin in late June, and by the time school begins in the fall, each staffer should have met his/her ad sale requirement- approximately $400. (For every

Advanced Journalism/Newspaper/ Multimedia

During the last several years, the InPrint staff worked to improve the quality and content of the publication. Their efforts are evident in the many awards they have received, including:

- 20 Spartan Awards (presented to the top newspapers in the state by the Michigan Interscholastic Press Association)
- Numerous regional and national awards, including two Gold Crowns and a Silver Crown from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association
- Induction into the MIPA Hall of Fame

We plan to continue this quest for excellence in 2016-2017. The role you will be required to play in achieving this goal is not as overwhelming as may seem. Each month, calendars are established to guide the writers and the editors through the production process. Writers are typically responsible for one or two stories each issue.

Online edition of the InPrint runs on a different schedule. The web site is in charge of covering stories and topics that are time sensitive and therefore cannot be placed in the print edition because they will no longer be relevant by the time it is delivered to the school. Because of this, writers who contribute to the web site will operate on a rotation system in which groups write and finish stories in a shortened production schedule. These stories may not always be in the typical story form that is read. Special videos, photo slides, quizzes, and other forms of multimedia will also be posted here that have been created by staff members. All of these skills will be taught to first year members.

As you may be able to gather from this information, everyone is working on an "independent study" basis. Students who are not comfortable or prepared for this type of classroom situation should not enroll in the class. It is important to note, however, that the student editors and the adviser will be available to give instruction and guidance. because we must deliver pages to our printer on schedule, each staffer must meet his deadlines, or their grade will suffer.

Another commitment each staffer must make is selling ads. Each staffer will be required to sell a total of approximately $35 in ads per issue. The ad sale grade accounts for 10 per-$100 a staff member earns in ad sales, he/she will receive $10 off the price of a yearbook.) The ad sale grade accounts for 10 percent of the student's overall grade. The rationale behind this is two-fold: first, we are responsible for earning our $60,000 publishing budget, and second, in all classes top grades represent outstanding work, going above and beyond, participating and succeeding in every facet of the class, and Advanced Publications is no exception.

We do not expect a new staffer to successfully complete these requirements without offering "basic training." The first few weeks of the class will be spent learning and reviewing the fundamentals of yearbook production. Topics of discussion will include theme selections, cover and end sheet design, content and coverage, photography and merchandising the yearbook. Days designated to selling ads will be reserved for the beginning of the year; however, it may be necessary to spend individual time outside of class to meet the $400 goal. A brief training session in June session will proceed the ad sale drive.

The MIPA summer workshop at Michigan State University is recommended for those students who are accepted to the InPrint staff. The workshop costs approximately $400. Materials will be available in rooms 5-109 as soon as they arrive. A fund-raising opportunity will be available in April/May.

The attached material includes a yearbook application and two teacher recommendation forms to be filled out by two teachers, one of whom must be a current or former English teacher. Please give the recommendation forms to teachers who can speak about your sense of responsibility and your academic ability. Ask them to return completed forms to me.

Positions for next year's staff include:

Staff Positions (usually for the first year members or returning member who are unable to make a big time commitment): Writer, Graphic Designer (work on computers designing ads), Business Staff (this is a positions for someone who is good with Excel and/or someone interested in marketing/PR/social media).

cent of the student's overall grade. The rationale behind this is two-fold: first, we are responsible for earning our $8,000 publishing budget, and second, in all classes a higher grade represents outstanding work, going above and beyond, participation and succeeding in every facet of the class, and Advanced Journalism is no exception. Every staffer who exceeds his/her ad sale grade goal by $75 receives a free yearbook.

We do not expect a new staffer to successfully complete these requirements without offering some sort of "basic training." The first three to four weeks of class will be spent learning and reviewing the fundamentals of newspaper production. Areas of instruction will include lead writing, journalistic style, copy editing, straight news stories and advertising sales.
